

Calling Venus

Lyrics by Sherrilynn Taylor

Copyright © 2008 by Sherrilynn Taylor

A perilous journey
he must take Far from the deepest jungle riverbank
All alone and so
Far from home
Trudging deeper into the Heart unknown
Winds he'd fought for miles
Suddenly stilled and
Up his spine
Shot a chill

I hear you
In the silence
I feel you
In the void
I'm calling
Who will answer
Does anybody hear
My voice?

In search of treasures
Long lost and forgot
Drawn by instinct to the Highest mountaintop
Muscles ached as sweat
Rolled off his cheek
Couldn't stop until he Finally reached the peak
Dancing between this world
And the next
He collapsed, exhausted
And all went black

Why do I go
To the darkness
To see if I can Find a light?
I've called and
Who will answer?
I need a message
From on high

As he spun
Round and round
Not knowing up
From down
A woman appeared
In flowing gowns
He could tell
She was not Earthbound

I'll heal you
In the silence
I'll transform you
In the void
You must jump and Trust I'll catch you
Don't fear falling
From this height

Let go of everything
And float weightlessly
Surrender to the breeze
Cut your cords and be free

All is one here
In the quiet
In this world
There exists no time
Space unfolds to
Grant all wishes
Your inner voice
Is what you'll find

Let go of everything
And float weightlessly
Surrender to the breeze
Cut your cords and be free

When he woke
He was back on the path
Only choice now
To go forward, or go back